The Most Holy Trinity C 2

Romans 5:1-5

Can Do

A lot of us try to hide our afflictions. If we hurt, we don't want people to know. If we're sick, we don't want word to get out. We don't want to attract attention. We prefer to keep the illusion that we are well, and others need not be concerned.

How strange it is then to hear Paul say of Christians, "We even boast of our afflictions." To Paul, his afflictions merely went to show how strong the power of God was. God could work through human afflictions in the miraculous way that someone in a wheelchair can still win a race, one who cannot see can still cook dinner, someone with hearing loss can still write music, and someone terminally ill can still teach and inspire. Sometimes the affliction itself becomes a means of showing how mighty one's inner strength really is.

In Paul's case, the afflictions were obstacles placed in the way of his preaching the gospel. The word of God was still able to spread in spite of these setbacks. Consequently, Paul says, "affliction produces endurance, and endurance, proven character, and proven character, hope, and hope does not disappoint."

Paul is never disappointed because the Holy Trinity takes care of him. He has peace with God through Jesus Christ, and the love of God has been poured out into him through the Holy Spirit. No wonder he could boast of afflictions.

Loving & Serving the Homeless of Kansas City

Strange Thing to Boast About

There's a woman who frequently comes to breakfast at Morning Glory. She's homeless. Even on a warm day she wears a heavy winter hat. Not sure why. She had an infection some time ago that nearly caused her to lose one eye. She didn't lose it, but her vision is impaired. She typically shoulders a backpack that contains all her belongings. I assume she sleeps outside.

She stands out among the others at breakfast for several reasons: 1) she's a woman, the vast majority who come are men, 2) her attitude is always positive, quick with a smile, and 3) she frequently speaks about her faith. Given her situation, you would expect her to be depressed, angry or despondent, but she's none of these.

In the readings this weekend, St. Paul says that he "boasts about his afflictions." Seems like a strange thing to boast about; most people boast of their accomplishments, or their strengths.

St. Paul says he boasts about his afflictions as they help him develop a "proven character." Elsewhere, he writes that he "boasts of his weaknesses" as it makes him more aware of God's power.

That woman who comes to breakfast recently came up to me and said with a big smile, "I have good news!"

"What?" I asked.

She said, "I've been off of drugs now for two months. It's something I never should have started. I'm feeling much better. God is helping me on my journey."

She sounded like St. Paul, that is, boasting of her affliction as it has revealed God's power. It explains why she smiles.

Every day a group of wonderful volunteers, like Jen and Melanie, work in the "clothing closet" helping Morning Glory guests in need of clothing or hygiene products.
